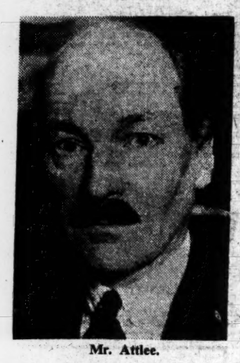
COMPLETE SURRENDER BY JAPAN

Allied Terms Accepted On Emperor's Authority



Mr. Attlee.

"PEACE ONCE AGAIN"
—MR. ATTLEE

"JAPAN HAS TO-DAY SURRENDERED. THE LAST OF OUR ENEMIES IS LAID LOW."

In these words, Mr. C. R. Attlee, the British Prime Minister, announced the end of the war at midnight over the B.B.C.

The text of the Japanese reply to the Allied demands was as follows:—

"With reference to the announcement of August 10th regarding the acceptance of the provisions of the Potsdam declaration, and the reply of the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and China, sent by Secretary of State Byrnes on the date of August 11th, the Japanese Government has the honour to reply to the Governments of the four Powers as follows:—

"(1) His Majesty the Emperor has issued an Imperial rescript regarding Japan's acceptance of the provisions of the Potsdam declaration.

"(2) His Majesty the Emperor is prepared to authorise and ensure the signature by his Government and the Imperial Headquarters of the necessary terms for carrying out the provisions of the Potsdam declaration.

"(3) His Majesty is also prepared to issue this communication to all military, naval, and air authorities to issue to all forces under their control, wherever located, to cease active resistance and to surrender arms.

"(Signed) TOJO."

General MacArthur has been appointed Allied Commander to receive the surrender.

Mr. Attlee announced that to-day and to-morrow "will everywhere be treated as victory holidays."

After Mr. Attlee's announcement, the National Anthems of the four nations—Britain, U.S., Soviet Union, and China—were played, and then followed a short religious service, conducted by Prebendary J. W. Welch, B.B.C. director of religious broadcasting.

HAVING read Japan's acceptance of the Allied terms of surrender, Mr. Attlee, in his broadcast this morning, said:—

"Let us recall that on December 7th, 1941, Japan, whose onslaught China had already resisted for over four years, fell upon the U.S.A. and upon ourselves, who were so oppressed in our death struggles with Germany and Italy. Taking full advantage of surprise and treachery, the Japanese forces quickly overran the territories of ourselves and our Allies in the Far East and at one time it appeared as though these invaders would reach the mainland of Australia and advance into India. But the tide turned.

THE TIDE TURNS

"With ever-increasing speed, the mighty forces of the United States and the British Commonwealth and Empire and other Allies were brought to bear, and Japanese resistance has now everywhere been broken.

"At this time we should pay tribute to the men from this country, from the Dominions, from India and the Colonies, to our Fleets, Armies and Air Forces that have fought so well in the campaign against Japan.

"Our gratitude goes out to all our splendid Allies, above all to the United States, without whose prodigious efforts this war in the East would still have many years to run. We also think, especially at this time, of the prisoners in Japanese hands, of our friends in the Dominions, Australia and New Zealand, in India and Burma, and in those Colonial territories upon whom the brunt of the Japanese attack fell. We rejoice that these territories will soon be purged of the Japanese invader.

DARK YEARS END

"Here at home you have earned rest from the unceasing efforts you have all borne without complaint through so many dark years."

He had no doubt that throughout industry generally the Government lead in the matter of victory holidays would be followed, and that to-day and to-morrow would everywhere be treated as days of holidays.

"There are some who must necessarily remain at work on these days to maintain essential services, and I am sure they can be relied upon to carry on. When we return to work on Friday morning we must turn again to the great tasks before us, but for the moment let all who can relax and enjoy themselves in the knowledge of work well done.

"Peace has once again come to the world. Let us thank God for this great deliverance and his mercy. Long live the King."

Heads Bowed in Shame

A WEEPING crowd of Japanese bowed to the ground before the Imperial Palace in Tokyo yesterday after being told that an Imperial decision had been reached.

A report of the scene, broadcast by the Japanese News Agency to the Far East and picked up in New York, stated:—

The crowds gathered in front of the Palace and cried: "Forgive us, Emperor, our efforts were not enough."

The report added: "The loyal people are bowed to the very ground in front of the Niju Bashi. Tears flow unchecked. Alas, in their shame, how can the people raise their heads?"—(Reuter.)

At the same time as Mr. Attlee's broadcast, President Truman spoke to the people of the United States.

Having read the Japanese reply, he called for a holiday, with pay, to be proclaimed to-day and to-morrow for all Government workers.

Describing them as "the hardest working—and, perhaps, the least appreciated—of war workers," he said: "On behalf of the nation, I formally thank you."

Appearing in front of the White House afterwards with his wife, in response to clamorous shouts from the crowd, the President declared: "This is a great day. This is the day we have been waiting for since Pearl Harbour. This is a day when Fascism finally dies, as we always knew it would. This is a day for democracy—but our real task lies ahead."

President Truman added: "In the reply there is no qualification. Arrangements are now being made for the formal signing of the surrender terms at the earliest possible moment."

"General MacArthur has been appointed Supreme Allied Commander to receive the Japanese surrender. Britain, Russia and China will be represented by high-ranking officers.

"In the meantime the Allied armed forces have been ordered to suspend offensive action.

"It is too early to propose definite figures for the occupation forces which will be required in the Pacific twelve months from now, or what reduction it may be possible to make of the army force now allotted to occupation duties in Europe. It is apparent, however, we can release as many as can be brought home by the means available—by sea and air—during the next year."

News of the Japanese surrender had been expected throughout yesterday following the announcement by the Japanese News Agency at 6.51 a.m. that an "Imperial message accepting the Potsdam declaration will be forthcoming soon."

Later it was reported that the Swiss Foreign Office had received Japan's answer, and that a similar communication had been sent to Sweden.

It was not until the midnight broadcast by Mr. Attlee and the simultaneous broadcast by President Truman, however, that the surrender was announced officially.

AT WESTMINSTER TO-DAY

In view of Japan's surrender, an alteration will be made in the Parliamentary arrangements for to-day and to-morrow. The State opening of Parliament by His Majesty will take place at 11 a.m. to-day as arranged. When the two Houses of Parliament reassemble at 12 noon, however, the Government will propose that they should at once attend Services of Thanksgiving, the House of Commons in St. Margaret's, Westminster, and the House of Lords in Westminster Abbey.

On return from the Services of Thanksgiving the Government will move in each House addresses of congratulation to His Majesty. The debate on the address, in reply to the King's speech, will be opened in the House of Commons to-morrow.

Far East War Shortened By One Year

HOSTILITIES in the Pacific have come to a close at least a year before the most optimistic experts expected, states the Press Association Diplomatic Correspondent.

American and British air and land forces will at once proceed to occupy strategic points in Japan to ensure that the armistice terms are carried out. The Royal Navy and the U.S. Navy will sail into Japan's great ports almost immediately.

Japan will not be occupied and ruled by the Allies as Germany is, but will be administered nationally and locally by Japanese authorities under Allied supervision. She will be permitted to retain her industries, so far as they are necessary to support her internal economy, but her war industries and potentials will be destroyed or handed over to the Allies.

Overrun territories will be handed back to those Governments from whom they were taken when Japanese aggression was at its height. War criminals, and particularly those guilty of atrocities and cruelties against prisoners of war, will be handed over or sought out and punished. Priority No. 1 will be to secure the release and repatriation of Allied war prisoners, including an estimated total of 45,000 British personnel.

Japan will have to toil and sweat to repair the damage she has done and the sufferings she has caused. Reparations in labour and kind will be extracted from her.

In due course, some attempt will be made to replace the totalitarian Government operating under a mystical Emperor, by a democratic régime.

COSTLIEST TASK

To-day many military experts are convinced that the use of atomic bombs has saved the lives of tens and, perhaps, hundreds of thousands of Allied soldiers; for although Japan was virtually beaten before the scientists stepped in, the invasion of the country would probably have been the Allies bitterest and most costly task of the war. Men, women, and even children were until a few days ago being exhorted to fight and die for the Emperor when the Allies landed on "September 10th."

It is difficult at the moment to estimate the effects on these fanatical people of their leaders' surrender. Hirohito may find himself now a discredited deity. The long course of successful Japanese aggression before and after Pearl Harbour had encouraged the belief that the Son of Heaven had inherited the earth. Now the idol has fallen; the dream of Asiatic domination has ended; the Navy has been destroyed and the Army beaten. Japan becomes a small Power without possessions and colonies. But the defeat of the aggressors in the East and the West was achieved only by sacrifice unparalleled in the history of this world.

The total cost in human life may never be known, but it has been estimated that 20 million fighting men alone have been killed. If to that total are added the millions who have died from starvation and brutality either in concentration camps or while slaving in Fascist factories, and the tens of thousands of civilian victims of air and scientific warfare, then the aggregate cannot have been far short of 30,000,000.

But the plans of the free nations of the world to bring lasting peace to a war-stricken world are far more advanced than they were in November, 1918. Already 44 nations have signed the Charter of the United Nations, and in London this week an Executive Committee, comprising the representatives of fourteen nations, will meet to make the final plans for the first great meeting of the new League—the United Nations.

Dublin Youth Saves Two Lives

A 17-YEAR-OLD Dublin youth, Donal F. Cunningham, son of Dr. Cunningham, Fitzwilliam square, saved two Arklow fishermen from drowning, and made an unavailing effort to save the life of a third man at Brittas Bay yesterday.

Two Arklow fishermen, M. Shelton, Abbey street, and Patrick Lawlor, with a deckhand, R. Mills, of Tinahask, put out in a fishing-smack from Arklow to Howth when, in the early morning fog, the craft struck a wreck at Brittas Bay.

Lawlor decided to swim the 100 yards to the shore while Shelton and Hill made a rough raft of fish boxes and loose boards.

Donal Cunningham, who was bathing, noticed the plight of the men, and swam out. He took the raft in tow, and brought it safely to the beach. When he learned that Lawlor had left the smack he plunged into the water again, and, after some search, he found him floating in the sea. He succeeded in bringing him to the shore, and applied artificial respiration.

He was assisted by Miss Sheila Meade, daughter of Sergeon Meade, Dublin, and later by Dr. Symmonds, of Wicklow, but their efforts were unavailing.

Shelton and Mills, who were suffering from exhaustion, recovered rapidly.

Mr. Lawlor leaves a wife and one son.

Irish Supplies For France Shipped

The s.s. Menapia sailed from the North Wall, Dublin, at 12.30 this morning for Granville with several hundred tons of supplies for the Irish Red Cross hospital at St. Lo, France, and about five hundred tons of sugar, part of the Irish Government's free gift to France.

Two other vessels also left the port—the s.s. Monaleen and the s.s. Rosita. The cargo of the Monaleen, which was bound for Cherbourg, included sugar and blankets, while the Rosita, bound for Antwerp, carried blankets, sugar and foodstuffs. It is understood that the goods were a further part of the Irish Government's contribution to Europe.

The cargo on the Menapia included six ambulances, one utility wagon and one lorry. Arrangements were also made for the conveying of sera and penicillin.

Russia Enters Into Treaty with China

An American broadcast from Moscow at midnight last night said it had just been announced that a treaty of friendship and alliance had been signed between Soviet Russia and China.

Complete agreement was reached on all questions of common interest, the radio said. The full text of the agreement will be published after it has been ratified by the Soviet and Chinese Governments.—(Reuter and Associated Press.)

Jury Considers Verdict In Petain Case

MARSHAL PETAIN made a short statement to the jury last night when his counsel had finished their speeches. Speaking on the twentieth day of the trial in a Court which was guarded by 1,300 armed gendarmes, he told the Court that whatever happened France would never forget.

Shortly after ten o'clock the jury retired to consider their verdict.

At the close of M. Payen's speech for the defence Pétain was asked if he had anything to say. He rose, took a paper out of his pocket, and read this statement:—

"During this trial I have kept deliberately silent, after having explained to the French people the reason for my attitude. My only thought was to remain with the French people on the soil of France, according to my promise, in order to try to protect them and ease their sufferings. Whatever happens now, the people of France will not forget. The people know that I defended them as I defended Verdun.

"Gentlemen of the jury, my life and my liberty are in your hands, but my honour I entrust to my country. Dispose of me according to your conscience, my own conscience is clear.

"After my long life, and having reached the threshold of death, I affirm that I have had no other ambition than to serve France."

Some clapping and applause greeted this statement, but was quickly suppressed.

After Pétain's statement, the 24 jurymen filed out to consider their verdict.

FINAL SPEECHES

M. Payen, chief counsel for the defence, told the Court at the outset that Pétain always believed in a British victory, and he fought silently and cunningly against the Germans. His guiding thought was to prepare for a resumption of the struggle at a later date.

Pétain's real purpose in meeting Hitler at Montoire, he said, was to obtain the mass release of prisoners.

In an appeal to the jury M. Isorni, Pétain's youngest counsel, said: "If you pronounce sentence of death against Pétain you will see how a Marshal of France can die. If I evoke this tragic and inhuman spectacle of an illustrious and venerable old man being led before a firing squad. I do so to make you realise your responsibility. If you condemn Marshal Pétain to death the nation will lament."

His voice trembling, Isorni cried: "Oh, my country, when will you cease to shed the blood of your own children? Judges, hear me. I know you are only judges; I know you are only human, but remember that at this solemn moment you hold in your hands the destiny of France."

Maitre Payen then produced a letter from Dr. Stucki, Swiss Ambassador to France and later to the Vichy Government, who wrote: "Pétain hated the Germans. During my four years at Vichy Pétain always displayed great aversion and marked hatred for the Germans. I never had the impression that Pétain ever seriously believed in the possibility of lasting co-operation with Germany. Nor do I think the Germans had any illusions about Pétain's feelings, and they constantly restricted his powers and watched him closely."

This letter was received two days ago, M. Payen said.

M. Payen also read a letter written by Ribbentrop to Pétain in 1943, in which Ribbentrop accused Pétain of making collaboration more and more difficult, and said that in future all French laws must be subject to German approval.

The Judge interjected: "Please also read Pétain's reply."

Pétain broke in: "There was no reply. My captivity was the ultimate consequence of Ribbentrop's letter."

Counsel said that Pétain was very happy about the Allied landing in Normandy, and wanted only one thing—to contact de Gaulle and hand over power to him.

MDME. PETAIN FREED

While the jury was still deliberating on the verdict on Marshal Pétain, Madame Pétain, who shares a prison cell with her husband, was informed that the charges brought against her have been dropped by the Court of Justice.

RUSSIANS RACE TO CUT OFF JAPANESE ARMIES

ALLIED troops yesterday were still fighting and dying against the battered outposts of the Japanese Imperial Armies in Burma, Borneo, China, and Manchuria.

Only 400 miles separated the armies of Marshal Malinovsky, on the west, and General Meretskov, on the east, in their drive across Manchuria to cut off the Japanese armies north of the Chinese Far Eastern Railway.

Both armies had mobile forces about 200 miles from Harbin.

Marshal Vassilevsky's Armies continued to make rapid progress in their three-pronged advance towards the central plain of Manchuria and the big cities of Hsinking, the capital of Manchuria, and Harbin.

General Meretskov's forces, pushing towards Harbin from the east, covered more ground after smashing a determined bid to halt them. At some points the retreating Japanese did not stop even to destroy railways, roads and bridges.

By Monday, Malinovsky's "flying vanguards" had covered 400 miles in four days. The Japanese report would place them 70 miles beyond the furthest point claimed by Moscow.

Japanese lines of communications between Korea and Japan were practically severed by planes and warships of the Soviet Pacific Fleet. Russian land-based torpedo planes sank two large transports, and torpedo boats struck at shipping under the very noses of Japanese shore batteries on the Korean coast.

Radar Discovery Saved Britain in the War

DISTRESSED because there were no known means by which Britain was likely to be successfully defended against air attacks in a war which even then seemed certain to come, scientific men at the Air Ministry, as long ago as 1934, informally approached a member of the National Physical Laboratory regarding the possibility of a death ray.

The response was immediate. There was no early hope of a death ray, but energy re-radiated from an aircraft ought to suffice for location.

An experiment was made. It was successful, and Radar was born. Yesterday the Government released for publication details of this great triumph of British scientists which changed Britain's air defence system in time for success in the Battle of Britain, and later transformed the methods of warfare in almost every arm and in every theatre.

By December, 1935, the Air Ministry had established a chain of five Radar stations on the east coast of England, the first operational Radar system installed anywhere in the world. In August, 1937, authority was given for 15 additional stations to be added to the chain, giving complete cover to the whole east and south-east coasts of Great Britain.

During the first year of scattered air raids the chain of Radar stations gave the first warning that sent the sirens wailing, but the great testing time of the chain's capacity and value was the Battle of Britain. Before long, by use of a beam, the actual position of an aircraft could be shown by a bright spot on a ray tube. So, all round the coasts in darkened buildings, often perched on desolate cliffs, men and women of the R.A.F. and W.A.A.F. peered at an uncanny luminous map which showed them the position of any aircraft approaching or passing long before they could hear its engines droning.

At first the one and a half-metre wavelength equipment adapted for night fighters was limited in range. The magnetron valve devised by a group of research scientists working at Birmingham University was the outstanding development since the original chain took shape, and it remains the keystone of the greater part of modern Radar.

NEW ERA

Its immediate availability for manufacture and improvement on both sides of the Atlantic opened a new era beyond even the most optimistic dreams of the early workers in both countries. By the end of the flying bomb attack Radar-aided A.A. guns were accounting for between 80 and 100 per cent. of the bombs reaching them. The scientists' later application of Radar on tiny wavelengths down to a few centimetres paved the way for the airborne Radar "map" device which led to Germany's disruption from the air.

Radar was of inestimable help in hunts for large surface vessels like blockade runners, as well as in finding big warships such as the Scharnhorst and the Bismarck. Without the help of Radar it is possible that the Bismarck's final dash to Brest might have been successful. It has made it possible for the Army to detect an infantryman crawling along the ground many yards away, and it has revolutionised coast gunnery.

The Dover defences ended the war in a blaze of glory when on the last night of the German evacuation of Boulogne they sank 11 ships out of 18 at a range of twenty miles, without seeing one of them.

ROCKETS TRACKED

Famous scientists, Radar experts and high service officers sat in serried ranks around the platform of the great conference hall at the Ministry of Information yesterday, when Sir Stafford Cripps, Chairman of the Radio Board from 1942 to May of this year, gave a summary of the developments of Radar, and predicted its great service to humanity in peace.

Sir Stafford claimed that Radar, more than any other scientific factor, contributed to the final victory. "And now that we can concentrate our thoughts upon the problems of peace," said Sir Stafford, "we see that Radar possesses far more immediate potentialities for the service of the human race, even than the splitting of the atom."

Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder gave his tribute to Radar as "one of the users, and the customer is always right." The unproven Radar chain was put around Britain only just in time and at the most critical moment of the whole business.

Sir Arthur was at Malta during their great fight against the German aircraft. He had never known anything so dramatic as when he sat in the operation room deep down in the bowels of the island, and through Radar could see the German bombers and fighters taking off, watch their course and give directions to his own fighters to smash them.

It was Radar which enabled them to strangle Rommel's sea-borne supplies and brought about the great episode when they sank his vital fuel ships just about to enter Tobruk harbour.

General Sir Frederick Pile said that in the early days of the war it was fifty to one against an enemy plane being hit in daylight, and a hundred to one against at night; but, with the development of Radar towards the end of the war, either by day or night, it was ten to one on that an aircraft would be hit.

Sir Robert Watson Watt, who early in 1935 produced the first practical and detailed proposals for locating aircraft by radio, told a Press Association reporter that very soon after Germany began to launch the V 2 rocket they were able to keep track of it from the moment it was fired until it reached its destination, and were thus able to give valuable seconds' warning to the authorities, which enabled them to take certain safety precautions.

Duke of Windsor Meets Mr. Truman

The Duke of Windsor spent 35 minutes with President Truman at Washington yesterday, renewing memories of the first world war, when the Duke visited the Western front in 1918, when Mr. Truman was a captain of artillery.

The Duke told correspondents that he and the Duchess would go to England "fairly soon," but that his plans for the future are still indefinite.—(Reuter.)

6,000-Ton Fire Raid

MORE than 1,000 Strategic Air Force planes, including 800 Super-Fortresses, operated against Japan in the last 24 hours, a 20th Air Force communiqué said last night.

The Super-Fortresses dropped about 6,000 tons of demolition and incendiary bombs during daylight yesterday and in the early hours of this morning on targets at Hikari and Osaka, and also on the Nippon Oil Refinery at Atika and the industrial areas of Kumagaya and Isesaki. Yesterday afternoon Iwo-Jima-based fighters struck airfields in the Nagoya area, the communiqué said.

All the targets named are on Honshu. Kumagaya is 40 miles north of Tokyo, and Isesaki is 43 miles from Oyama, north of Tokyo.

Earlier in the day 150 Marianas-based Super-Fortresses dropped 2,000-pounders on Iwakuni, south-west of Hiroshima, and on the arsenals at Hikari and Osaka.

The U.S. Navy Department announced last night that the heavy cruiser Indianapolis was lost recently in the Philippine Sea from Japanese action.

The casualties were:—Navy, five dead, 843 missing, 307 wounded; Marine Corps, 30 missing, 9 wounded.

It was simultaneously announced that the Indianapolis on her last mission carried essential atomic bomb material from San Francisco to Guam. She delivered the cargo safely, and was lost shortly afterwards.—(Reuter.)

Dublin Man's Death Remains A Mystery

A number of men were taken to College Street Civic Guard Station last week in connection with the death of Mr. John G. McEntaggart, of Dunfirth, Rathfarnham, Dublin, who died on July 23rd last after he was assaulted outside the Classic Skating Rink, Duke street, on the previous Saturday night.

Following identification parades the men were released, and, although the Guards are continuing their investigations, there is no sign of any immediate solution to the mystery.

An Irish Times reporter was informed at the Coroner's office that no date had been fixed for the inquest, as inquiries were still being made.

Calves Killed for Want of Fodder

The slaughter of the calves continues in Eire, and, for a six months' period of the present year, it is computed that 24,000 were killed in three Southern districts for export alone. This number does not include calves slaughtered for factories and private persons.

The meat that is not being exported as veal is being fed to greyhounds. It is the view of the trade that the Government should rectify this matter; for if the slaughter persists, it is submitted, the country will be depopulated of stock in the next few years. The trade holds that tillage should be reduced to the greatest extent possible, and that more land should be turned to pasture.

The slaughter is stated to be due to the scarcity of fodder last winter. It is pointed out, however, that this year's harvest prospects are bright, and that there should be a plentiful supply of hay.

Chinese General Defies Order

According to a New York quotation of the Chinese Communist wireless transmitter at Yenan, General Chu-teh, leader of the Chinese Communist forces in North-West China, has sent a radio message to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek refusing to accept an order to the 18th Group Army to remain at their posts.—(Reuter.)

Dublin Needs More Indoor Pools

ONLY one indoor swimming baths, at Tara street, serves Dublin's half-million population. The Iveagh, Dublin's other indoor baths, has been closed for two years, and is now being used as a health embarkation centre.

Belfast and the big English cities and towns cater adequately for swimmers of both sexes. Swimmers must have at least a foot-bath before they are allowed to enter these waters. Unlike Tara Street, they are equipped with filtration plants and have an atmosphere of cleanliness, warmth and cheerfulness, even in the winter months.

Down the years Dublin's public men have been agitating for suitable baths; but, beyond the Rathmines scheme, which reached the plan stage, nothing tangible has resulted.

Enthusiastic schoolboys, like those from St. Andrew's College and Drogheda Grammar School, solved their problem by constructing swimming pools—St. Andrew's at a cost of £500, and Drogheda Grammar School at less than half that amount.

Swimming and life-saving now are virtually compulsory in the Irish Army, and splendid baths, with filtration plant, have been built at the Curragh at a cost of £17,000.

Mr. W. H. Downing, the noted British coach, says that Tara Street Baths could be transformed into a swimming school and baths for about £2,000. At the moment these baths are the drabbest of their kind anywhere. Given facilities equal to those obtaining in England and Belfast, Dublin swimmers, especially the girls, who have the physique and the brains to learn, could hold their own with the best anywhere, states Mr. Downing, who is to give a further demonstration of swimming instruction at Tara Street Baths to-night.

The Lord Mayor, Alderman P. Doyle, T.D.; Mr. T. Derrig, Minister for Education; Mr. O. Traynor, Minister for Defence; Mr. S. MacEntee, Minister for Local Government and Public Health; Dr. P. J. Hernon, City Manager, and Dr. M. Russell, Medical Officer of Health, have been invited to attend.

Irish Wives of Internees May Go to Germany

It was learned yesterday that the German internees who left Dublin on Monday will be demobilised on their arrival in the zone of Germany administered by the British authorities.

It was further stated that the Irish wives of internees, who were left behind, will be provided with facilities for joining their husbands when transport becomes available. As regards their status, it is understood that under the Irish Citizenship Act they will retain their Irish citizenship.

The members of the recently dissolved German Legation in Dublin—namely, Dr. Eduard Hempel, Minister Plenipotentiary; Herr Henning Thomsen, Secretary to the Legation, and Dr. Carl Heinz Petersen, Press Attaché, are still in this country. So far as can be ascertained there is no law or international code directing their disposition. Diplomatic convention, however, is that such persons have the right to chose to remain where they are. Their status is that of aliens, and they remain in this country as alien residents. As such they may seek and be given employment, but any person who desires to employ them must first get a permit to do so under the Aliens Order, 1935.

Neither from the headquarters of the military at the Curragh Command nor from Dublin Castle was there any information last night regarding the nine German internees who escaped deportation by breaking their parole. When the internees have been rounded up they will be sent out of the country.

A TREBLE FOR P. J. LENEHAN?

FROM OUR RACING CORRESPONDENT.

THE Dublin trainer, P. J. Lenehan, will saddle three horses at Tramore to-day—the third day of the meeting—and quite possibly all three of them will win their respective races. Grafton Street looks a handful to ride, but yesterday he ran sufficiently well to suggest that he will beat Willie Ryan and Church Law in the mile and a half race for maidens, while in the handicap flat race Joe the Marine strikes me as just the type to nip handily around the sharp bends.

Mr. Lenehan's own gelding, Crafty Prince, has staged a remarkable "come back" this year, and has won his last three races off the reel. He runs in the handicap 'chase, and, although he carries top weight, he may succeed in beating another rejuvenated veteran, Canoodle, and the lightly-weighted Agag.

Bramford Only Solace For Backers

THE racing was well up to the standard at Tramore yesterday, but backers had a very lean time. The money was piled on The Lynx in the opening event, but Mr. Cox's grey was never travelling like a winner. The race was won by Shangri, whose pilot, Mr. Stokes, had to ride hard to keep the last finishing Night Flight and Pat Lacey at bay. The last-named was rather unlucky not to have won.

Those system-mongers who always support the outside of three would have collected over the Waterford Plate, in which Canadian Woods beat his two better-backed rivals. This was one of the best contests of the day, as all three had a chance a furlong from home. Brighter Sandy might have won but for a mistake at the last fence.

Bramford brought backers a welcome relief when he made all the running to win the Annstown Plate. P. Powell, jun., was the successful jockey, and he certainly took no end around around the bends. Derk, who had won on the first day, finished second, after being tailed off for the greater part of the journey.

Australians Impress

By F. D. MacWEENEY

THE Australian players who have entered for the Co. Wicklow tennis championships at Bray made their first appearance yesterday; and, even though the opposition was not very serious for a start, two of the visitors—O. W. Sidwell and E. Felan—polished off their opponents with the smooth efficiency of first-class players who take their game seriously. Sidwell, Australian junior champion in 1938, and ranked No. 4 in that country, can claim to be the leading player in Great Britain at present. He did not concede a game to an Ulster player, H. Legg, who worked hard and hit some quite good forehand drives, but whose weakness on the backhand made him an easy mark for the Australian.

PACE AND LENGTH.

With the customary equipment of a fast first service and a high-kicking second one, Sidwell got all the pace and length necessary off the ground with easily-produced shots. Felan was given more to do by another Ulsterman, B. McGlade, who hit a number of excellent shots off the ground, which deserved a better result than they achieved. A more spectacular player than Sidwell, Felan, with his sliced back-hand, did not appear to be as sound off the ground as his fellow-countryman, but his ability to drive a low volley on either wing makes him, perhaps, more attractive to watch. If these two meet in the final, as seems likely, exceptional tennis should be seen.

The third Australian entrant, de Voss, did not look to be in the same class as the other two on yesterday's form; he had to work hard to dispose of yet another Ulster visitor, McBride, and showed little beyond steadiness in doing so. The Canadian, P. J. Pearson, may put up strong opposition to the Australians, for his attacking type of game is well suited to the fast courts at Bray. Results:—

Men's Singles—1st Round—F. S. Lyons bt. S. Foster—8-1, 6-4; D. C. Coombe bt. J. W. Lane—6-3, 6-0; P. J. W. Pearce bt. J. McGarry—6-1, 6-0; A. R. Gillespie bt. W. Lyttle—6-0, 6-4; E. Felan bt. B. It May Be A Burke-Ewing Final

By J. P. ROONEY

JOSEPH BROWN, who won his two South of Ireland championships in 1932 and 1933, remains favourite for this year's title. He had two very hard games yesterday, however, and from what I saw of the morning play (we wisely remained in the clubroom while the third round competitors were getting a severe drenching in typical Lahinch weather), I have no hesitation in expressing the opinion that Cecil Ewing and John Burke will replay—in a manner of speaking—their West of Ireland final.

Ewing won his two matches against the Rathdowney man, P. Malone, and R. H. McNally, of Sutton, very comfortably indeed, having to go no farther than the twelfth green, and the same could be said about Burke in his games with J. Kiely, and a local rival, B. O'Farrell. Ewing, making this first attempt to break the monotonous run of successes of the champion, who has won the title nine times since 1928, is playing magnificent golf. "It is the trickiest links I ever played on," said he, "with any amount of trouble"; but, so far, he has mastered all trouble and, while his timing of the puts in the morning may have left something to be desired, his long game and seconds were of colossal length.

UNBEATABLE?

Burke also is playing excellent golf, and, of course, is regarded by many here as unbeatable. He was not extended in either match. Had he been he might have done better on the approximate. He was three under bogey when he beat O'Farrell in the third round at the seventeenth.

Brown had a particularly hard match in the morning with the Bray three handicap player, J. Moran, who, by his wonderful putting, brought him to the home hole.

SECOND ROUND.

B. Stanley (Lahinch) beat J. Mallin (Lahinch)—4 and 3; B. McMahon (Ennis) beat J. Hill (Lahinch)—4 and 3; M. Crosbie (U.C.C.) beat G. Steedy (Rathdowney)—3 and 2; J. B. Carr (Skibbereen) beat P. F. Purcell (Portmarnock)—5 and 4; J. Burke (Lahinch) beat J. Kiely (Muskerry)—5 and 4; B. O'Farrell (Lahinch) beat R. Kirkpatrick (Tullamore)—3 and 2; F. Gartaly beat V. Hamilton (Woodbrook)—3 and 2; M. P. Fitzpatrick (Surrey) beat J. J. McElligott (Dundoras)—6 and 5; T. C. Ewing (Co. Sligo) beat P. Malone (Rathdowney)—6 and 5; R. H. McNally (Sutton) beat E. John (Cork)—3 and 2; O. Cahill (Lahinch) beat D. F. Gleeson (Ennis)—1 up; M. Power (Muskerry) beat P. A. Moloney (Ennis)—5 and 4; C. Brown (Waterford) beat J. Moran (Bray)—2 up; M. O'Loughlin (Lahinch) beat P. C. McMahon (Ennis)—4 and 3; J. Dolan (Castletroy) beat N. S. Nuggent (Ballina)—5 and 4; J. O'Hanlon (Arklow) beat D. Torrins (Ennis)—1 up.

Third Round—Slattery bt. McMahon, 6 and 5; Carr bt. Cronin, 3 and 1; Burke bt. O'Farrell, 3 and 1; Fitzpatrick bt. Garrihy, at 19th; Ewing bt. McInally, 7 and 6; Power bt. Cahill, 3 and 1; Brown bt. O'Loughlin, 2 and 1; Hanlon bt. Dolan, 3 and 2.

II: Miss O'Reilly (36) and Miss Dunne (39), 67, tied (playoff). To-morrow—Miss A. Gubbins's prize, stroke was it done, and Egan said that some could be got from establishments in Belfast and Dublin by shoplifting. He said that fellows went round a shop, and, while one was talking to the assistant, another put the suit length under his coat. They said they would try it. He also said that if they could get English material he would pay them £4 per suit length. Egan told them that the best of material was in Siberry's, Dame street. Later Skelly agreed to try it with them.

Witness gave evidence of their taking suit lengths from Siberry's, and said they got £4 from Egan. Egan said he would pay them another £4 the next day.

When they next called, Egan said he had not sold the second suit length. He told them that if they could get any more to take it, as he had a lot of orders for it. He mentioned Phillips's, Watkinson's, Menswear, Arnott's, and a number of other shops that witness could not remember.

The further hearing was then adjourned.

Strong Support for Gas Ord.

MARKETS again made a busy showing on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, and public interest was on a broad scale. Local securities were generally in good demand, and a few firm features developed. British Industrials were rather hesitant, and scattered liquidation put prices generally lower.

Alliance Gas Ord. were strongly supported on the increase in profits and distance in the dividend, and they closed 1/- higher at 24/6. Ranks (Ireland) Pref. jumped 1/- to 30/-, and H. Williams Ord. soared 3/- to 107/6. In Draperies, Pim Bros. Pref. and Switzer Ord. both tended higher.

Irish-American Oil Pref. strengthened 1/- to 34/-, while Independent Pref. rose to 36/6, and Irish Cinema Pref. to 25/-. Yam Seng Rubbers, in active dealings, hardened to 2/6. Power Deb. improved to 23/9, but Polikoff (I.F.

It's hard to get up...

... off this spring filled mattress

There is one disadvantage, we must confess, about a "Nelpha" mattress: it's so deliciously restful that it's extremely hard to leave. Made to a health expert's plan, it offers comfort which you have never experienced until you lie on it. Containing hundreds of resilient springs, its surface consists of abundant layers of soft, fleecy wool and the best hair obtainable. You won't find any bumps or irregularities, but superb uniformity of comfort throughout. Yes, it's hard to get up off a "Nelpha," but it offers such refreshing sleep that it's well worth the effort. Visit our showrooms for an inspection, or enquire from any first-class furnisher.

FINIS

Japan has surrendered, and the most destructive war in history is at an end. For all practical purposes, it reached its end last week, when Tokyo, overawed both by the Russian declaration of war and by the frightful results and potentialities of atomic bombing, offered to submit, on the sole condition that the prerogatives of the sacred Emperor should be safeguarded. Everything since then has been shadow-boxing. Japan's submission from the moment when the first atomic bomb fell was inevitable. The alternative was extinction—the blotting out of a hundred million human beings. We do not know—who, outside the inner circle of the Japanese Government, knows?—what has been happening behind the veil. It is evident that the doomed nation's leaders have been at loggerheads. The concept of a great, modern Japan, which may rise again from the ashes of its present humiliation, clearly has been at war with the historic traditions which can brook no surrender. To the older type of Japanese honour is everything, and even the certainty of defeat and death is preferable to submission. Only such a conflict between tradition and cold fact can have delayed Japan's reply to the message in which the Allies qualified the Emperor's omnipotence. The tragedy is that, while Tokyo's statesmen have been trying to make up their minds, the war has been going on. Russian troops have been advancing farther and farther into Manchuria; Allied aircraft have been pouring their bombs upon the great cities of Japan. All the life that has been lost in the last few days could have been spared by an earlier recognition of the inevitable.

"Meteoric" is a sadly worn word; yet it fairly describes the rise and fall of Japan as a Great Power. Fifty years ago she was little more than an island empire; four years ago thousands of square miles of the richest territories on earth were in her grasp. She had humbled the pride of Great Britain and of the United States in the Far East, where her position seemed to be impregnable. What a change has taken place! To-day she is reduced to a lesser estate than that which she occupied before the war of 1904-5 with Russia. Under the terms of the Potsdam Declaration, she will be stripped not merely of the overseas possessions which she has seized since 1941, but of all those which she had appropriated during the preceding half-century, and her sovereignty will be limited to the islands that would have been marked as "Japanese Empire" in an atlas of a hundred years ago. Even that remnant of territory will be subject to occupation by Allied forces, which will not be withdrawn until the victors are satisfied of her will and capacity to behave herself. It is a severe fate for a proud—and cruel—people; yet the peace of the world demands no lighter sentence. Whether it will be possible to restrain the soaring ambition of Japan remains to be seen. The chances are, however, that, with the elimination of the war lords who have been the origin of her glory and of her destruction, she will cease to indulge her dreams of domination, and will resume—with variations—her long tradition of quiet industry. It may happen otherwise; but Russia, if not the other Powers, will ensure that it does not happen otherwise for a very long time.

Japan's surrender will come to the whole world with a sense of relief. It is true that the fall of Germany removed the most terrible and immediate menace to democratic civilisation, and that since then the triumph over Japan has been merely a question of time, and the Far Eastern war an anti-climax. Nevertheless, the vast problems of the peace could not be faced so long as Great Britain and the United States—to say nothing of the Soviet Union—were compelled by Japanese stubbornness to think in terms of war, rather than of reconstruction. Now the world, headed by the three Great Powers, can face the future with clearer minds and undivided purpose. Day by day, and month by month, more men will be available for the remodelling of the shaken world. The ships that were required for the transport of war material to the Pacific zone of operations will be diverted to the carriage of the foodstuffs which are so cruelly needed by three-quarters of continental Europe. Many years, perhaps, must elapse before the world returns, even in a superficial degree, to normality; yet, at last, it is possible to make a clean start. Heaven knows that the necessity of a clean and rapid start is insistent. Unless it is made, the only result can be, as Mr. P. J. Noel-Baker, Mr. Attlee's Minister of State, said before the Council of UNRRA in London a few days ago, "famine, disease, anarchy and bloodshed." These terrors will not be confined to the vanquished. They will be experienced in severe, if not in equal, measure by neutrals and victors as well. The almost superhuman energy which has gone to the maintenance of six years' war must be re-harnessed to the task of undoing the ill effects of those years. Otherwise, humanity is doomed to generations of suffering.

The Roman Eagle

Readers of the Manchester Guardian were quick to make their protests when that newspaper's "Miscellany" was rash enough to stage this month a modest celebration of the anniversary of Cæsar's invasion of Britain in 55 B.C. In fact, as the readers pointed out, the anniversary properly does not come until the next year; for there was no year 0. The error is an easy one to make—indeed, it is rather more difficult to understand exactly why it is an error—and the writer hardly can be blamed. In any case, there is no harm in calling attention to Cæsar's activities, even a year prematurely; for the comment may serve to remind the schoolboy that the Latin which he translates so painfully is really history, and that the name Cæsar is not merely an ancient version of "Crosaire." It is not easy to appreciate the greatness of a man who has been caricatured by Shakespeare—though, for good dramatic reasons—and maligned more recently by comparison with the late Duce. In particular, it is difficult in this country, which almost alone in Europe does not bear the stamp of the Roman conquest. If the legions had ever borne their eagles as far as the shores of Ireland, there is no knowing what effect they might not have had upon the history of the nation. The Continent of Europe has raised the edifice of its modern civilisation—however battered it may be for the moment—upon the foundation laid by Rome. England bears, not only in the names of Cirencester and York, not only in the roads that still march after the centurion's staff, but even in the fabric of her life the traces of those invading troops. Rome, indeed, is the eternal city; the Roman who came to Rye never left again. All the nations of Europe drank from that common fount, and it forms an unbreakable bond of culture between them. Virgil, as Mr. T. S. Eliot has said, is not merely a classic, but "The classic—the classic of all Europe." Cæsar's Commentaries are the record of the man who forged the chain that binds a continent.

NORTHERN TRIBUTES TO DUKE OF ABERCORN

AT Stormont yesterday both Houses of Parliament of Northern Ireland presented addresses to the Duke of Abercorn on the occasion of his retirement from the Governorship, which he has held for more than 22 years.

It was Parliament's only business for the day, and there was a large attendance of M.P.s and Senators and distinguished visitors.

The addresses paid tribute to the Duke, whose qualities in the dark days of the war served for a beacon and an inspiration, and to the Duchess.

The address from the House of Commons said: — "Your own personality has done much to strengthen the ties which bind us to our traditional policy, while elsewhere Principalities and Powers, less firmly founded, have crumbled into ruin."

DUKE'S REPLY

In the course of his reply, the Duke, addressing Parliament for the last time as Governor, thanked it for the expressions of loyalty. Much of the goodwill shown to him was given to him as representing the Crown, the symbol of the unity of the British Commonwealth of Nations, but the spirit shown everywhere had been something warmer than allegiance.

After a tribute to Northern Ireland's war effort, he said: "I am confident that the spirit which has brought us to victory will ensure into the days of peace. I am sure that, with courage, foresight, and goodwill, the tasks will be worthily performed, and Northern Ireland will enjoy a prosperous and happy future."

THE CORK STREET CASE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—In view of the reliance by the Minister for Local Government on a decision of the House of Lords to prove what was never contested, viz., that he is under no legal obligation to publish the now famous inspector's report, your readers may be interested in the opinion of a British civil servant of eminence and experience upon the accepted policy and practice in the matter. The following will be found at page 111 of "The Higher Civil Service of Great Britain" (Oxford University Press, 1941), by H. E. Dale, C.B., formerly Principal Assistant Secretary, Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries.

There are a few cases where this theory of the complete subordination of the civil servant to his Minister breaks down as a theory, mostly in cases where the official is placed in a semi-judicial position for the time being.

It is easy to construct an imaginary illustration. While a Labour Government is in power, the Town Council with a Labour majority, in a constituency where a Parliamentary by-election is expected, is accused in public of distributing contracts with undue favour to persons of the same political party as the majority. It may be very awkward for the Government if the charge is proved; it may even mean the loss of the seat at a time when it is politically important to the Government not to lose a by-election.

Under the usual procedure an Inspector of the Ministry of Health is directed to hold a local inquiry. He knows perfectly well—he can hardly help knowing — that his Minister wants a report favourable to the Council. Both of them are equally aware that In practice his report, or its substance, is bound to be published.

What is the Inspector's duty? The answer is not in doubt. Loyalty to truth and fact, as he sees them, must come before loyalty to the wishes of his Minister; he is acting as a judge, not as an executive officer carrying out the Government's policy. It would be wrong of him, I think all civil servants would agree, to modify his findings of fact and the inferences he draws from them, in order to make things easier for the Minister.

The italics in the above quotation are mine.— Yours, etc.,

"LEX."

THE ATOMIC BOMB

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—Your correspondent, J. W., bases his letter, published on Friday last, on the assumption that certain methods of warfare are morally superior to others, and that there is a definite standard of fairness which the Allies claim to uphold. He states that, by the use of the atomic bomb, the Allies' war guilt is greater than that of the perpetrators of Pearl Harbour and Buchenwald.

The saying "All is fair in love and war" is extremely dated. It refers to a time when wars were fought between individuals—armed, perhaps, with muskets or bows and arrows. Nowadays, superiority in warfare depends on the scientist and the engineer. The soldier, the sailor, the airman are no longer individuals, but part of a gigantic machine. Wars of aggression are immoral: and he who first sets, or causes to set, this destructive machine in motion is guilty of murder in the first degree.

Some years before the war German concentration camps were in fearful existence; before the war, Pearl Harbour was attacked. The war in Europe was brought to a close by the destruction of certain areas in Germany; and the war in the Far East by the use of the atomic bomb.

Which side, then, is the most guilty? He who kills before war is declared, or he who brings war to a swift conclusion?

Perhaps, J.W. would prefer that the war should drag on in a gentlemanly fashion—only a certain number of deaths being allowed per diem—until both sides (with a depleted population, whose oldest constituents can scarcely remember peace time) become too exhausted in mind and body to continue. Perhaps, he would prefer that members of a family should be killed at suitable intervals to enable their relations to mourn them during their last months of life, rather than that all further bloodshed should cease by the first probe of a new and paralysing instrument.

Perhaps, indeed, it is hard for some people to see the moral distinction between Buchenwald and Hiroshima.—Yours, etc.,

F. N. M.

Co. Dublin.
